DECLASSIFIED

MONDAY
AUGUST 17, 1953

On the way to the office this morning I stopped at Gaston Reinnette's and bought a clay pigeon trap which I propose to install at Versailles.

Young William Holland Wilmer, grandson of my distant cousin the famous oculist, called on me. He is an engaging [redacted] man of twenty-two who has just finished his first year at the Harvard Law School. He spent last summer in Formosa studying Chinese, and has been living with a French family this summer. He hopes eventually to go into the Foreign Service, for which I should think him admirably qualified.

The Slaters came to see me at the office.

Went down to Versailles this afternoon and spent the night. More dead rabbits -- the stench in the park of Versailles is pervasive.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE A/CDC/MR
REVIEWED BY CEC DATE 7-1-81
□or XDS□EXT. DATE
TS AUTH. REASON(S)
ENDORSE EXISTING MARKINGS □
DECLASSIFIED☑ RELEASABLE☑
RELEASE DENIED□
PA or FOI EXEMPTIONS

DECLASSIFIED